Every Marketing and Sales Manager is Familiar with the Old Marketing Funnel. At the Top of the Funnel sits Awareness, followed by Engagement, Discovery, Purchase, and Retention. Traditional Marketing Practices are built around this Idea: A Lead enters at the Top of the Funnel, becomes an Interested Consumer and emerges, like magic, as a Loyal Customer. Defining your Goals directs the Kind of Content and Strategies you use to gently guide your Customer towards that Goal.

Content is the Fuel that moves Customers through the Stages of the Marketing Funnel. For your Content to be effective, you have to ensure that it offers your Customers a Personalized Experience. It's up to you how you segment your Marketing Funnel: go the Simple Route with Three Sections or chop it up into 10, whatever works best for you.

You can gather the Quantitative Data for an Analysis like that via Google Analytics or through a Third-Party Data Platform. You'll want to look for Data Points like Geography and Demographics that better pinpoint who your Customers are. Gathering Qualitative Data as well will give you a Richer Insight into your Target Audience. Then, you'll start to make Inferences from that Data. What you learn will inform the Channels and Style of Marketing you'll use. From this Information, create Buyer Personas that detail the Common Characteristics of the Main Types of Customers that Frequent your Shop.

TikTok is a Short-Form Video-Focused Social Networking Platform that launched in 2016. It was originally known as Douyin in China but released internationally as TikTok in 2017. ByteDance, the Chinese Company that owns TikTok, bought the App Musical.ly in 2017 and merged it with TikTok to create the App we know today.

If you've already built a Social Media Presence, you're probably wondering why it's worth investing in a TikTok Marketing Strategy. TikTok Marketing will give you Access to a Younger Target Audience. While Facebook is still Fairly Popular, the Data shows that the Younger Demographic favors more Visually-Based Social Media Platforms like TikTok, Instagram, and Snapchat compared to their Older Age Groups.

Thanks to their Seamless Inclusion in the Platform, TikTok Ads help move Users Down the Sales Funnel. Feed Ads on TikTok are a Full-Screen, Sound-On Experience and No Different from Normal TikTok Content. The Full-Screen Experience means Users are less likely to be distracted compared to Standard Facebook Feed Ads... Fewer Distractions = More Conversions.

Influencers can help you promote Products in a Way that differentiates your Brand from your Competition. What's more, when Followers of Influencers see them promoting your Products, they're more likely to trust you by Association. This is something a Normal Ad can't help you with.
